

Telling Our Story

ANNUAL REPORT TO THE MEMBERS 2001

In 1976, the Birmingham Historical Society created its DOWNTOWN DISCOVERY TOUR, a guided experience of the city center, and a tour book. Downtown buildings were old, tired, unused and unappreciated. But the students on tours loved them.

It's a new century. Most of downtown's buildings have been fixed up. Children who discovered them as students now lead tours and teach the children who take them, encouraging all to look and see, enjoy and care for our city's heritage.

An exhibit at the Birmingham Public Library showcases the new Downtown Discovery Tour + Heritage Hunts and celebrates 25 years of tours.

Among participants at the opening reception, above, are Pat Camp and Marjorie Lee White, crowned with laurels in appreciation for their service; Society President Sara Ruiz de Molina and stalwart volunteer Emma Bell; left, McElwain students Jake Thomas and Asia Anchrum share the buildings they built for the exhibit with their families and tour guide Carole Sanders; and, right, Katherine Parker Shepherd (with Jim and baby Abigail) check out the Time Line of Birmingham she illustrated for the tour book. Research & Documentation

Research this year included the recording of house types from the city's earliest years to post World War II, the planning for development of public parks in the 1920s and 1930s, and civil rights history.

Volunteers Regan Huff and Edgar Marx help work on the Discovery Tour exhibit.

Left, Joy Philpot; right, Gregory Wilson, Victor Blackledge and Lola Hendricks led the try outs of the new History Hunts, as part of a Birmingham Cultural Alliance Program.

Praises to Peggy for holding down the fort at the office and getting this report to you.

Meetings & Events

Trustee Martin Hames hosted the Annual Meeting in honor of Gov. B. B. Comer and his descendants at The Altamont School Fine Arts Center. Talks by Ellen Cooper Erdreich, Gillian Goodrich and Mr. Hames introduced the

The gracious Susie and Peter Janders, left, hosted the annual Heritage Society Party at their beautifully restored home, the J. Warner Shook house. Pascal Shook told stories of growing up at Uncle Warner's in the early 20th century as the younger generations listened.
